CHAIR'S WELCOME

Dear friends and delegates,

Welcome to the Heritage Canada Foundation's 2007 Annual Conference. Thirty-four years ago the Heritage Canada Foundation (HCF) was established as a national, membership-based organization with a mandate to promote the conservation of Canada's historic places.

Notably, this year our conference brings together a dynamic mix of planners, developers, community leaders, activists and government officials who together can make heritage and development work. It is particularly timely that this year's conference is in Edmonton, a historic city in a period of tremendous economic growth and development. We are also excited about our new initiative, Engaging Stakeholders in Heritage Development, and invite you to contribute your ideas throughout the conference.

I look forward to seeing you in Edmonton.

George C. Chalker
Chair, Board of Governors
Heritage Canada Foundation

Engaging Stakeholders in Heritage and Development

A national consultation opportunity initiated by the Heritage Canada Foundation.

The Heritage Canada Foundation is embarking on a consultation process to engage stakeholders—elected officials, developers, planners, policy makers and advocates—in identifying the perceived and real systemic barriers to conservation, sharing solutions and success stories in heritage and development. The goal is to offer stakeholders a chance to share their perspectives on information gaps and the changes needed to improve the way heritage and development play out in our communities. The outcomes of this initiative will help set the groundwork for a 'roadmap' to guide future research and action.

HCF's annual conference in Edmonton, Big Plans for Old Places: Heritage and Development in Canadian Communities (October 11-14, 2007) will serve as a workshop where representatives from the stakeholder groups can discuss goals, priorities and strategies. During formal and informal discussions we will be encouraging you to give your input on four key questions:

1. How can the principal partners in heritage development – advocates, policy makers, elected officials, property developers and planners – work together toward more successful heritage outcomes?
2. What does each group need from the others?
3. What are the priorities for change?
4. What are the data gaps?

Goals for Heritage and Development:

- That stakeholders in heritage and development have shared goals.
- That heritage and development are like bread and butter – they work well together.
- That elected officials, heritage advocates, developers, and planners have the tools to conserve heritage resources and achieve compatible development.
- That all stakeholders get what they need out of a heritage development project.
- That the planning process accommodates heritage and development.

For more information on this initiative, to receive updates or to get involved, please contact Camille Girard-Ruel cgirardruel@heritagecanada.org, by phone 613-237-1066 ext. 237 or visit our website www.heritagecanada.org.

Assembly Hall, Edmonton Public Schools Archives & Museum (McKay Avenue School), 10425-99 Avenue

- Book Launch for Capital Modern: A Guide to Edmonton Architecture & Urban Design 1940-1969 published by the Art Gallery of Alberta.

Construction began on the McKay Avenue School in 1904 and shortly after completion it housed the first two sessions of the Alberta legislature in 1906 and 1907. In 1976 it was designated a Provincial Historic Resource. The school closed in 1983 but with assistance from the federal and provincial governments, it was rehabilitated and is now home to the Edmonton Public Schools Archives & Museum.

7:30 pm

LECTURE: Places Rebuilt or Places Reborn: Is There a Difference?

MacLab Theatre, The Citadel, 9828-101 A Avenue

- Roberta Brandes Gratz

New York's visionary urban critic and author Roberta Brandes Gratz conveys in words and images how development projects can produce either lively or lifeless urban spaces – from downtowns to small towns and neighbourhoods in between.

Copies of Roberta Brandes Gratz's books, The Living City and Cities Back from the Edge, will be available for purchase. Thanks to Audrey's Books.

Roberta Brandes Gratz is presented by the Edmonton Cultural Capital Program in partnership with Creative City Network, Edmonton Design Committee, Media, Art and Design Exposed (MADE) in Edmonton and the Heritage Canada Foundation.
